

Abstract

The invention relates to a method for the detection and identification of amino acid modifications, such as phosphorylation, using a combination of affinity capture and mass-spectroscopy.